In this comprehensive guide, we will provide you with everything you need to know about sending your millennial to college. We will cover topics such as:

- Choosing the right school
- Financing higher education
- Supporting your child's mental health

- Helping your child succeed academically

Choosing the Right School

One of the most important decisions you will make is choosing the right college for your child. There are many factors to consider, such as:

- Your child's academic interests
- Your child's career goals
- The school's location
- The school's size
- The school's cost

It is important to visit different colleges and talk to current students and faculty to get a sense of what each school is like. You should also encourage your child to apply to a range of schools, so that they have options to choose from.

Financing Higher Education

College is a major investment, and it is important to start planning for it early. There are a number of ways to finance higher education, including:

- Scholarships
- Grants
- Loans
- Work-study programs

It is important to explore all of your options and to make a plan that works for your family. You should also be aware of the different types of loans available and the terms and conditions of each loan.

Supporting Your Child's Mental Health

The transition to college can be a stressful time for any student. Millennials, in particular, are facing a number of unique challenges, such as:

- The pressure to succeed
- The fear of failure
- The anxiety of being away from home for the first time

It is important to be aware of these challenges and to provide your child with the support they need. You should encourage your child to talk to you about their feelings and to seek help from a counselor or therapist if needed.

Helping Your Child Succeed Academically

Once your child is in college, you can help them succeed academically by:

- Encouraging them to study regularly
- Helping them to develop good time management skills
- Providing them with a quiet place to study
- Checking in with them regularly to see how they are doing

You should also be aware of the different resources available to students at your child's college. These resources can include:

- Academic advising
- Tutoring
