Lafferty was born in Oklahoma in 1914. He began writing short stories in the 1950s, and he quickly gained a reputation for his unique style and vision. His stories are often set in strange and wonderful worlds, and they feature characters who are both ordinary and extraordinary. Lafferty's stories are also known for their humor, which is often dark and subversive. But beneath the humor, there is always a serious message, and Lafferty's stories often explore the big questions of life and death.
